Crop Statistics

Their Great Value
A Start Is Made
A Suggestion

CHINA has been described as a non-statistical country. To some extent this stigma is undeserved, for every year the Chinese Maritime Customs publishes the figures of the import and export trade of China. In addition to this, quarterly returns of the trade of the country are published while the commissioners at the Treaty ports review annually the trend of the trade in their different provinces, making such comments on the salient points as are called for in an official document of such a nature. The value of these statistics to the trade in general is recognised but the belated nature of the publications robs them of much of their usefulness. Official publications, however, the world over take long to compile. The task, we admit, is big, and accuracy must not be sacrificed for expediency.

It is recognised that were the task of collating trade statistics left to the Chinese Government it would in all probability have never been undertaken. The Chinese Imperial Maritime Customs Service is the only department of the Chinese Government that is organised on Western lines and produces any statistical returns. It, therefore, forms the chief security which China has to offer when desiring to negotiate a loan from the Powers. Trade statistics in China under the management of the Imperial Maritime Customs date back to 1864.

NO CROP STATISTICS

On the other hand, the compilation of reliable data about the production and area under cultivation of the principal crops of the country has never been tempted seriously by the Chinese Government with the result that statisticians are continually complaining of this serious lack of enterprise on the part of such an important agricultural country. What is essentially a paramount duty of the Chinese Government is today being attempted by private bodies. For instance, last week the Cotton Millowners' Association at their annual general meeting bemoaned the want of a central department for the dissemination of forecasts of the growing crops in the country.

Recognising that the representations made in the past had failed to produce any result, this body of foreign millowners interested in cotton culture have decided to have their own organisation for the purpose. The scheme calls for the outlay of money and the establishment at all the principal points of cotton growing areas correspondents whose duty would be to make exhaustive inquiries about the state of the crop, the damage done by typhoons, floods, pink worms, the probable yield, the area under cultivation, and in short, discharge all those duties that would ordinarily devolve upon inspectors of a well-organised agricultural department.

We congratulate the Cotton Millowners' Association on this new phase of their enterprise, and have no doubt that the benefits to the textile trade of China will be profound. At present the Chinese Cotton Millowners' Association essay the compilation of these statistics for the information of the trade, but there is variation between the figures they publish and those that private sources clean.

INCALCUABLE BENEFITS

How far the scheme of the foreign cotton millowners will be an improvement on the Chinese it would be hazardous to state, but, if anything, two organisations working on the same subject will be stimulated in their task. We say this because the knowledge that two distinct bodies working on one mutual plan is certain to engender a desire on the part of each to have its figures unquestioned. There is a vast field for both these associations, and if the task is undertaken wholeheartedly—and there is no reason to suppose that it would not be, at any rate, by the foreign millowners—the benefits to the trade would be incalculable.

A properly organised and fully efficient department for the collation and dissemination of all the data about the cotton crop, etc. would involve the outlay of a large sum of money, but there is no reason why the Chinese Government should not be compelled or coerced to make a contribution, with the mills defraying the balance. Probably after the course of a couple of seasons the Chinese millowners. Association might be made to co-operate with the Foreign Millowners' Association and have the whole scheme merged into one.

It would seem there is little necessity for two similar bodies pursuing a similar task. The cotton mills, both Chinese and foreign, could be taxed for the work of collecting reliable data about cotton and the maintenance expenses of the department defrayed from this taxation. The scheme of the foreign millowners calls for reliable correspondents being selected in the various cotton-growing districts for re-

Three Armed Robbers Given Prison Terms

Three men charged with armed robbery were given prison sentences in the Mixed Court yesterday, one going to jail for twelve months and the other two for six months. A fourth defendant was also found guilty and was remanded one week pending further investigation of his record.

The four were charged with committing two robberies, in one of which they only obtained $4 and in the other, at 189 Amoy Road on September 29, obtaining $350 in money and jewelry. Witnesses in this latter case stated that a pistol was used to intimidate them. The defendants, who declared that the charge was false and brought against them out of animosity by the complainant after a fight, maintained that no pistol was used, but that some firecrackers were fired. One of the accused said that he had bought the crackers to frighten the dog of a friend upon whom he was about to call.

FOUR ROBBERS STEAL 30 PEARLS WORTH $4,500

Report Highway Robbery On Changsha Road.

Four robbers held up a shop assistant as he was entering his home and robbed him of 30 pearls valued at $4,500 on Thursday evening, according to a report made to the Municipal police yesterday.

The shop assistant, Zien Dienching, had been given the pearls by his employer, Toong Chiahfoo, a pearl dealer in the Chinese City, to take to the concubine of a man named Dong at 14 Kuling Road for inspection as she was a prospective purchaser.

He left the Chinese City at 4:30 o'clock and went first to 11 Bubbling Well Road, where he ate, and then went to 14 Kuling Road. The concubine did not buy the pearls and he decided to go to a Chinese club at 56 Chefoo Road before returning to the Chinese city, he reported. After leaving the club he started for his home at 143 Changsha Road and was just outside when the four men approached and robbed him. They are said to have made no show of arms and no alarm was raised. The police are investigating.

Dictatorship Looms As Possibility In Germany; Smaller Cabinet Planned

Fall Of Government Is Described As "Last Parlimentary Government" At Berlin; Stresemann Strength Is Doubted In Paris

(Reuter's Service)

Berlin, Oct. 4.—It was the Social Democrats' refusal to give the Government the authority provided by the Emergency Law for the abolition of the eight-hour day that was chiefly responsible for the fall of the Government which is described as the "last Parliamentary Government."

A proclamation of dictatorship by President Ebert is regarded as a possibility. In any case, Dr. Stresemann will have only a few Ministers and his Government will be practically a dictatorship.

(Exclusive China Press)

Berlin, Oct. 5.—Three were killed and several wounded today at Bindenburg, Upper Silesia, when police clashed with a crowd of workers who had assembled for the purpose of demonstrating against the government.

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, Oct. 4.—Havas gives the following details of the circumstances which brought about the resignation of the Stresemann Cabinet. The Cabinet had asked the Parties to grant it very extensive powers in political, financial and social matters. The Cabinet considered that the stabilisation of the mark was not possible without energetic measures being taken in the domain of production. The Government proposed to take action in three directions: heavier burdens should be imposed upon the wealthy classes; the question of prices should be treated according to new principles, the hours of work should be increased, especially in the mines. Understanding could not be reached on the social questions between the various factions and, the Socialists desiring to retire, the Cabinet resigned. Chancellor Stresemann is credited with the intention of forming a new Cabinet with a considerable reduction in the number of Ministers for reasons of economy. Such a combination would mark an inclination towards a dictatorship. Bavaria seems to be taking steps in this direction. The decision of the new Commissioner-General, Dr. von Kahr, increasing the penalties laid down for the crime of high treason is symptomatic of the reactionary state of mind reigning at Munich.

The Temps asks if the Bavarian Government intends to apply to the German people the decrees of the occupied [illegible] the death penalty [illegible] established by Dr. von Kahr decree.

With regard to the financial situation of the Reich it is reported that the fiscal revenue for the period between September 10 and 20 will only cover 1½ per cent of the expenditure, the floating debt on October 1 having reached 54,000,000,000,000,000 marks. The gold loan officially yielded 164,000,000 gold marks, out of which 31,000,000 gold marks alone were paid in currency and 3,000,000 gold marks in other gold security, while the rest was in paper marks.

German propaganda, desirous of defaming abroad the attitude of the Allies in occupation of the Ruhr, alleged that certain Germans, who had hindered Allied action, had been deported to Guiana, but the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung now recognises the inexactness of these allegations.

The Temps states that the general opinion in Belgium is in favor of meeting with firmness the dilatory manoeuvres or subterfuges of Germany. M. Jaspar emphasised that effective resumption of work in the Ruhr and the Rhineland must be awaited, that the Allies must surround themselves with the indispensable guarantees, they must preserve the pledges as long as necessary and that they must obtain deliveries in kind before considering any modifications whatever in the regime of occupation.

French and Belgian information confirms that the relaxation is becoming more pronounced in the occupied territory.

The Paris Figaro anticipates serious developments.

S. S. Lenin, Barred From Japan, En Route From North

The s.s. Lenin, formerly the Russian Volunteer Fleet ship Simbirsk, has sailed from Vladivostok for Odessa, via Shanghai, and is due here on October 12, according to informaton received yesterday.

When the Lenin docks in Shanghai it will be received by an official delegation from the w.k. Shanghai Municipal Police who will, in addition, keep a kindly eye on the ship as long as it is in port.

The police do not fear that the Monarchists and the Reds will do battle for the possession of the ship, or that it is carring a load of bombs, or anything like that, but they're simply going to take the necessary precautions, as prescribed on the bottle.

The Lenin, it will be remembered, was the Russian relief ship that began landing food supplies in Yokohama. It didn't land much. The Japanese discovered that every box and bag of food contained Bolshevik epigrams and other kindly advice concerning "Now is the time for all good Reds to kick out the Emperor," and such. And just what the Lenin is carrying as cargo to Shanghai is not known!

New Peking Chief Rose From Rank Of Private In Army

Tsao Kun, newly elected president of China is sixty-years of age and a native of Chihli. Thirty-eight years ago, he was but a common soldier. On account of conduct in the army and his commanding personality, he was sent by his immediate chief to the Military School in Paoting to receive a higher education and in 1890 he graduated and was engaged by the same school as an instructor.

In 1895, Tsao Kun was appointed director of the Soldiers' Training School at Hsiaotsan where Yuan Shih-k'ai organised his celebrated modern army for the Imperial Ta Tsing Dynasty and where Marshal Tuan Chi-jui was one of the three aides.

After the Boxers' Uprising in 1900, Tsao Kun was invited by Ti Liang, the Manchu warlord, to assist him in the training of the recruits at Paotingfu. A year later, he was promoted to the rank of regiment commander, being in command of 1,500 soldiers. In 1902, he became brigade commander, doubling the size of his former forces and was made a full general shortly after.

COMMANDS AT MUKDEN

With an army of 10,000 troops, Tsao was sent to Mukden by Ti Liang in 1903 as garrison commander, serving in the Fengtien capital for almost two years. In 1905, he was transferred to Kirin with his soldiery where he stayed until the revolution broke out in 1911. Then he was ordered to proceed to Lanchow, Chihli, to suppress the rebels. He was successful in his mission, after which he was sent to Shansi where he defeated the revolutionary forces and recaptured the provincial capital of Sianfu. In recognition of his services, he was created commander-in-chief of all forces on the Upper Yangtsze from Hupeh to Szechuen with headquarters at Yochow, Hunan.

When General Tsai Ao in 1915 started his movement against Yuan Shih-k'ai in Szechuen, Tsao Kun was despatched by the Dictator to fight him. After the death of Yuan, he returned to Chihli and was made the military governor of the province.

General Tsao was appointed commander-in-chief of the troops in Hupeh and Hunan to suppress the Southwest in 1917 but met with little success. Two years after, the forces in Szechuen and Kwangtung were also placed under his command.

In 1919, he was created Inspector-General of Chihli, Shantung and Honan. After emerging victorious in both the Chihli-Anfu and Chihli-Fengtien fights, he was awarded practically all the high honors and decorations that the nation could bestow upon him.

ALL AMERICA WILL PASS ON PLAN FOR PEACE

Bok Contest Will Close On November 15; Award Set For Jan. 1

A nation-wide referendum for approval or disapproval of the peace plan which will win the Edward W. Bok $100,000 prize will be undertaken some time next January, according to a statement issued by the American Peace Award, 342 Madison Avenue, which has charge of the contest. Should the plan win popular indorsement it will be submitted to the United States Senate with the powerful backing of public opinion.

A co-operating council has been formed, composed of representatives chosen by fifty civic, religious and industrial organisations throughout the country, to aid in making the proposed referendum a success. Since the contest closes November 15, it is believed the jury can select the winning plan by January 1, at which time the first $50,000 will go to the author of that plan.

The second $50,000 will not be awarded until the Senate officially disapproves the prize plan, so that the referendum will make the winner's chances far more bright than winning the $100,000 in cash.

Greeks Seeking Recognition As Aid In Refugee Crisis

Washington. — Diplomatic recognition of the present Government of Greece is to be pressed upon President Coolidge by citizens of that country, as well as by a group of Americans, who have been sympathetically watching the efforts of the people there to regain a footing after their defeat by the Turks and the overturn of the Constantine regime. Humanitarian considerations, based on the need of receiving outside encouragement in meeting the refugee problem will be advanced as a reason why America should resume the relationship that was broken off in March, 1921.

To the majority of Americans, the statement that the United States and Greece are diplomatically in much the same relationship as that between the United States and Mexico, probably will occasion surprise. It will cause further surprise when they are told that friends of Greece blame this country in considerable measure for the reverses suffered by the Greek army in Smyrna. This, they say, is true, not alone because of failure of the Washington Government to re-establish diplomatic relations, but because of the refusal to permit Athens to draw on any part of $33,000,000 credited to Greece on the books of the United States Treasury.

PROMISE OF FUNDS

The record of events leading up to the present strained conditions in the affairs of the two countries goes back to February, 1918, when, in accordance with a decision of the Supreme War Council, the United States agreed to supply Greece with funds in a sum not exceeding $50,000,000, to assist her in carrying on certain military and naval operations required by the Allies in Macedonia and in the waters of the Aegean Sea. The contract provided that the transfer of money under the agreement was not to be made until six months after the conclusion of peace between the United States and the central powers. The intent of the agreement seems to have been that Greece was to finance the military operations herself, but was to have this money to fall back upon and used for the rehabilitation of the country after the war was over.

The Treasury Department accepted the obligations and placed $48,236,269.05 to the credit of Greece upon the books of the Treasury.

The agreement further provided that in case the foreign balances of the National Bank of Greece or the Greek Treasury fell below 100,000,000 gold francs, Greece would be entitled to draw upon the Treasury of the United States for a portion of the loan. In December, 1919, the condition referred to having taken place, the Government of Greece requested an advance of $5,000,000. This was made, but the Treasury specified that the sum should be expended within the United States for goods to be used in Greece. In January, 1920, and again in September, 1920, additional sums of $5,000,000 each were paid over under a similar agreement, leaving the balance still due $33,236,629.05, but since that time no further amounts have been paid. As Greece had issued paper currency against the amount of its credit, the failure of the United States to pay over the balance is declared to have had the effect of lowering the value of the drachma, increasing the cost of necessities in Greece, and hindering the Greek Government in its purchase of supplies.

GREEK ELECTIONS

Friends of Greece say the failure of the United States to carry out the terms of this contract was apparently bound up with the refusal of the United States to recognise the Greek elections of November, 1920. By that election a government came into power which favored the return of King Constantine, who had been driven into exile in 1917. A plebiscite was held, and his return to Greece followed in December, 1920.

The European allies declared that if the Greek people restored him to the throne, they would receive no further financial support from the Allies. In this declaration the United States did not join, though it did not see fit to recognise the return of the King. For a few months the American Minister remained at Athens and carried on formal diplomatic relations with the parliamentary government, which came into power after the elections. But when the United States Senate failed to confirm the appointment of the American Minister, made by President Wilson, the office automatically became vacant. Since then there has been no American Minister at Athens, nor has Washington received a Greek minister.

REVOLUTION AFTER ROUT

In the fall of 1922 a revolution occurred in Greece, due to the dissatisfaction of the Greek people with the defeat in Asia Minor. The old government was driven from power and a revolutionary government entered upon the scene. The new regime has been in power for about 10 months, during which period it has performed, its defenders say, the functions of a government, by maintaining internal order, safeguarding the rights and properties of foreign citizens, and carrying out obligations with foreign nations. Since that time, friends of Greece point out, revolutions have occurred in Italy and in Bulgaria, and America still has an Ambassador at Rome and a Minister at Sofia.

Failure of the United States to pay the balance due on the loan has crippled Greek finances, while the failure of the State Department to recognise the present Government of Greece was considered by the Turks as a support of their cause, it is charged.

While the fire was sweeping the city of Smyrna and the refugees were huddled upon the quay, American relief organisations, supplemented by the American Navy, arranged for the transfer of these people to Greece and assisted in the transfer. They took the refugees to Greece because Greece was the only country that would take them in, not because all the refugees, or even a majority of them, had a real claim upon the Greek people.

PERMANENT FINANCING

The emergency is not over, nor will it be, until some form of permanent financing has been arranged which will enable the Greek Government and the people to establish upon the land and in various industries all of the refugees, it is said.

In support of the plea for a resumption of diplomatic relations, it is pointed out that Greece went to Smyrna in the first instance under a mandate of the allied and associated powers. This mandate was given with the full approval of the President of the United States, and the Greek landing in Asia Minor was not any more imperialistic than that of the Italians or the French. In fact, it is said, the Greeks had reason for going there that neither the Italians nor the French had. Asia Minor was the ancient homeland of the Greek race, and a large percentage of the inhabitants were Greek, so that Greece went there to redeem her own, while the French and Italians occupied the position of adventurers seeking for concessions.

The total number of refugees in Greece, or on the way, according to latest figures, is slightly more than 1,200,000. Of these more than 100,000 are Armenians and other non-Greek races; 210,000 are Greeks from the interior of Asia Minor and from the Pontus—sections never occupied by the Greek army and not claimed by Greece either under the allied mandate or otherwise; 180,000 are from Thrace, ceded to Greece by the Allies and then taken away from her, and over 50,000 are from Constantinople. More than half of the refugees, then, are from territory in which there were no military operations, and almost 10 percent are of alien race.

GEORGIA BOY IS WORLD CHAMPION FOR FEW MINUTES

Referee Intimidated Into Giving Him Decision Over McTigue

(Reuter's Service)

Columbus, Georgia, Oct. 4.—Young Stribling was tonight awarded the Light-Heavy-weight Boxing Championship of the World against Mike McTigue, who fought in spite of an injury to his left thumb, owing to the ugly attitude of the public.

The referee, Harry Ertle, who officiated at the Dempsey-Carpentier fight, first declared the match a draw at the end of the stipulated 10 rounds, but changed his decision in consequence of a hostile demonstration by the spectators. Mr. Ertle was subsequently escorted by police to his hotel.

Stribling is an 18-year old high-school boy, trained by his father and mother.

Mr. Ertle later declared that he had never indicated a draw, but took pressmen's opinions, all of whom favored Stribling.

Later.—The fight was three hours later officially declared a draw, the referee saying that he gave Stribling the decision under the spectators' intimidation.

JAPANESE IN DIRE NEED, IS LONDON VIEW

Major Brackley Appeals For Generous Aid To Nippon

(Reuter's Service)

London, Oct. 4.—Major H. G. Brackley in a letter to the Times appeals for aid to the Japanese Relief Fund. He declares that hundreds of thousands of Japanese are in a position of real despair.

The Japanese are proud and seek to conceal their sufferings. They are reluctant to ask for aid, but nobody who seeks to appreciate the true situation can fail to realise the immense need in which they stand, especially with the winter approaching.

Any one in England able to aid the Lord Mayor's Fund may be assured that he is contributing to make life on bare necessaries just possible for these stricken people. The Japanese, besides being thrifty and hardworking, are a grateful people with long memories.

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, Oct. 4.—M. Merlin, the Governor-General of Indo-China, has sent to the Indo-Chinese medical mission in Japan a new shipment of medicines, including 7,000 bottles of sera and 350,000 doses of various vaccines. At the request of the Japanese Government there will be no more consignments of rice from Indo-China to Japan. The Governor-General has placed at the disposal of the French Ambassador at Tokio 900,000 francs for urgent help to the French victims, for the construction of a temporary common French home at Yokohama and the construction and maintenance of the Embassy, a dispensary and an ambulance.

(Eastern News Agency)

Tokio, October 5.—Four hundred and ninety-nine Chinese refugees, who had been cared for in the barracks at Narashino, along with 26 refugees who had been quartered on the site of the destroyed Chinese Legation, left Shibaura for Shanghai on the 2nd on board the s.s. Chojun Maru. Another party of the remaining 602 Chinese refugees also left for Shanghai today on board the s.s. Chitose Maru. The number of the Chinese refugees, who have been sent home at the hands of the Japanese authorities, totals 2,099.

FIRST DANCE AT NEW NAVY 'Y' IS A HUGE SUCCESS

Several Hundred Sailors In Attendance For Initial "Hop"

The Navy "Y" "gym." packed by several hundred sailors and officers and over a hundred American and British girls, was the scene of a highly successful dance last evening. It was the first dance given in the new "Y" building and was voted a most gratifying success by all concerned.

The excellent Huron band and the popular Downie's Crasiatic Orchestra furnished music for the dancing and there were many novel entertainment features. The orchestra from the U.S.S. Whipple played some lively jazz selections during the intervals and there were a "Moonlight" waltz, tag dances and so on, with a strong demand for encores. At 11 o'clock a grand march was staged, proving one of the jolliest features of the evening, and afterward flashlight photographs were taken. Tasty refreshments were then served.

Mr. Seaton, of the flagship Huron, acted as master of ceremonies, conducting the dance in a highly satisfactory manner.

The ladies' committee in charge of the arrangements included the following: Mrs. Paul W. Brown, Mrs. Amos B. Hazard, Miss Marie Speidel, Miss Mary Bell, Miss Ruth Moody, Miss Lucile Graham, Miss Ada Eickmeyer, Miss Marian Toulmin, and Mrs. J. E. Doyle.

Last night's dance was such a successful one that the committee has decided to hold another in the near future.

Girls Form Exclusive Indiana Boost Club

Rose and Mary Wilton Believe in Hoosier State

"And," said Rose Wilton triumphantly, "we just got sick of advertising Georgia and the Carolinas and all those states, when there was good old Indiana that raised us and looked out for us and is really home, sweet home to us. So we collared a Hoosier song writer who is a friend of ours and said—"

"Now you write us a piece about Indiana, that's what you do," broke in Mary in a voice so much like her sister's that you would never have dreamed one had stopped speaking and the other begun if you hadn't been watching their lips.

"And he did," Rose took up the tale promptly. "It's 'Blue Hoosier Blues', a perfectly grand waily foxtrot, and maybe you think we don't sing it with expression!"

They do, and the song has carried the team billed as the "Wilton Sisters" right to the top of all the programs they grace.

"We're a Hoosier boosting club of two," proclaimed Mary, "and we suit our words to our actions by putting our money into land back home."

"And this summer we're going to London to boost the Hoosier state by singing the 'Blue Hoosier Blues' there," ended Rose happily.

American Children Aid In Feeding Those Of Europe

Sofia.—How the children of America are feeding many thousands of the children of other lands who otherwise would go hungry was shown to the representative of The Christian Science Monitor, by the Rev. Ernest E. Count, superintendent of Methodist Episcopal churches in Bulgaria, who is conducting the work of feeding the needy children of Sofia. The funds for the work are collected by the youngsters of the Sunday schools of America. The objects of this gracious charity are the school children of Germany, Austria, Hungary and Bularia.

"Merciful Little America," is the name which the poor children of Sofia have devised for the charity which furnishes them with a good meal once a day during term-time. The collecting of funds is done under the auspices of the board of Sunday schools of America. Last Christmas "Merciful Little America" put into the contribution box no less than $500,000 for the purpose of feeding its little brothers and sisters in foreign lands.

On the closing day of the work for this school year in Sofia every one of the 110 children enrolled in the fund was present at the special meal which had been prepared and was served under the supervision of the matron, Mrs. Vassilka Ikonomoya, a Bulgarian lady who was educated in America.

A remarkable feature of the work, as conducted by Dr. Count, is its entire freedom from sectarian endeavor in any form. Jewish and Mohammedan children sit shoulder to shoulder at the table. There is no sectarian effort as such. The only question put to applicants is if they are worthy of the extended aid. Dr. Count said:

"This is the second year we have been doing the work. Last year we had about 190 children, to whom we gave a hearty meal on every school day during the year. Our meals consist of bread as much as any child can eat, with soup—a rich, nourishing food, as good as that I had served at my own table.

"Of the soup children are allowed a second helping or as much as they can eat. After the soup comes an appetizing stew. The way the children improved under this feeding last year was amazing. We keep careful track of their work in shool after they begin to take their daily meal in the assembly room of the public school, where the food is served.

"In all instances practically, the teachers report a noticeable increase of efficiency after the first week of feeding. There have been instances where because of hunger and want, chidren have shown a lapse of attentiveness and the power to memorize that indicated a weakening intellect.

"This year, owing to the general improvement of conditions of living in Bulgaria, the number of children we have been feeding has been reduced to about 190. Our fare is so wholesome, at a minimum cost, that we have had many applications from well-to-do parents for board for their children. Of course, all such requests we have had to deline.

"And let me assure the American children who have contributed to the fund that their little Bulgarian proteges are profoundly grateful for their kind thought. When the feeding began last year, some of the children came to me and asked me for my advice as to the name they should apply to the charity from beyond the ocean.

" 'You'll have to think up a name yourselves' I replied. 'Merciful Little America' was their own hoppy thought. It expresses the feelings of their hearts toward their little benefactors in faroff America."

Crop Statistics

ports to be collected and forwarded to Nanking, where the Nanking University would be entrusted with the work of sifting and compiling the statistics.

OTHER PRODUCTS

Now that a start appears to have been made in the matter of crop statistics it would seem that something should be done to get better and reliable data about the other agricultural products of China. China is reckoned among the richest countries for oil-yielding crops both from the point of view of the various products cultivated and also the extent of the area cultivated. A sad feature of it is that no complete and reliable figures are published on the area and production of the principal crops. The figures for rapeseeds, groundnuts, linseed, soya beans, horsebeans, etc. are incomplete and at best, doubtful.

The state of these different crops is seldom known in season, and all that simmers through to Shanghai and the important markets is the merest babble of the Chinese dealers, who are not slow at disseminating the vaguest reports of the yield and condition of the crops to suit their private ends. The securing of accurate facts and figures in this connection is one of the principal obstacles to the produce trade, and there is no reason why some attempt should not be made by the exporters and those interested in the trade to subsidise the new effort of the Foreign Cotton Millowners' Association. The plan of the latter could be made the nucleus on which to build an agricultural department independent of the Chinese Government, except that the Central authorities might be induced to make a contribution annually towards the maintenance of this department. There is here the germ of an excellent idea, and we offer it to the association and the produce trade in the hope that it will have their serious consideration.

DIAMONDS WORTH TLS. 60,000 IN MIXED COURT

Diamonds valued at Tls. 60,000, gathered from various Chinese pawnshops by Mr. H. D. Rodger, counsel for the plaintiffs, gave forth the only sparkle in the long-drawn out diamond case in the Mixed Court yesterday.

The case, in which R. and L. Goldmuntz, a Belgian firm, is suing Tsing Kong pawnshops, represented by Mr. K. E. Newman and Mr. Sidney Moss, has been before the court on and off since last April, the plaintiffs alleging criminal misappropriation of diamonds entrusted to the owner of the pawnshops for sale.

It came back into the public eye when Mr. Rodger, acting under an order of the court, conducted a search of the pawnshops and recovered several large diamonds. The Chinese Chamber of Commerce protested against the search on the ground that the defendant was a highly respectable business man.

The manager of one of the shops testified yesterday concerning one of the diamonds—weighing 31.78 carats—that was recovered, said that the police had produced the necessary warrant when the search was made.

The case was again adjourned.

RUSSIAN IN COURT CHARGED WITH MURDER ATTEMPT

Wife, Slashed With Knife, In Critical Condition

Alexander Lunafeyon, the Russian charged with attempting to murder his wife with a knife at 446 Taku Road last Sunday night, appeared before Assessor Ivanoff and Magistrate Tsang at the Mixed Court yesterday, the case being adjourned owing to the woman's inability to appear. She is in hospital in a critical state but it is believed that she will recover.

Dr. E. L. Marsh gave testimony regarding Mrs. Lunafeyon's condition when brought to hospital. He had to take over forty stitches in her wounds. The weapon used, which was found by the police in an adjoining house, and was produced in court, is a huge butcher's knife.

Notice of the attack was given to a foreign police officer on Yates Road by another Russian. The police officer found the woman lying in a welter of blood and after bandaging her sent her to hospital. The Russian informant, one Ishenoff, declared that the husband was the would-be slayer and he was found and arrested in the house next door where the knife was found wrapped up in a jacket.

London Market Reflects Peking Move On Mission

(Reuter's Service)

London, Oct. 4.—Commenting on the Chinese Government's appointment of a Financial Commission, the Times remarks that the value of the enquiry depends upon the capacity of the investigators. Fortunately the personnel of the Commission is strong.

The news of the appointment had a good sentimental effect on the market for Chinese securities yesterday, but the crucial test of the Government's action will come when they are faced with the task of carrying out the Commission's recommendations.

Foreign capitalists are only too anxious to invest funds in the development of China, but they will hesitate to do so as long as Chinese finance remains in its present chaotic state.

De Dios Knocks Carletos Cold Again At Stadium; Winner Is To Meet Tingle

End Of Main Bout Of Extra Fine Card Comes Suddenly In Fourth, When Victor Crashes In A Right Uppercut; Prelims Full Of Action

By Westa

In the fourth round of their scheduled twelve round scrap at the Stadium last night Faustino De Dios caught Kid Carletos an uppercut that landed on his chin, passed down through his neck, backbone and legs and didn't stop until it had buried itself six feet in the ground.

Faustino unleashed this wallop just a fraction of a second before the gong ended the fourth round, giving the Kid a full minute to recover; but minutes were not what Senor Carletos was looking for. What he really required after that punch was a pulmotor and the undivided attention of a highly trained nurse.

It was a terrible clout that Faustino uncorked. The Kid was fresh at the time, as the fighting until then had not been particularly vicious, both boys contenting themselves with sparring, jabbing and feinting, punctuated by a few brief sessions of dogging it that were not productive of any great harm. Both had missed some wicked punches, some by a hair's breadth and some by a mile; but this one landed, and despite the Kid's freshness he went down with a thud. Referee Sam Davis started to count, but at the count of one the gong rang, whereupon the Kid's seconds ran out to pick him up.

THE KID WAS "FINISH"

He was as limp as a bag of oats, with no interest whatever in the proceedings. His helpers rubbed him with ice and fanned him with towels and put smelling salts under his nose. But it was all useless; the Kid was plumb and completely out—outer than Casey; outher than old Downan' himself.

Previous to that pile driving wham on the chin the scrap was a good one, although not as lively as the earlier meeting between the two boys. Carletos was not as eager to mix it as he was at the last party and except for some lively infighting there was hardly a blow struck, although De Dios did manage to plaster one against the side of the Kid's knob that shook him up a bit. This clout and one from the Kid's mitt that caught Faustino on the peekoo, much to the amusement of the spectators—and the scrappers themselves—were about all that materialised in the hitting line.

THEY MIX IT A BIT

In the latter part of the fourth they started to enliven things a bit and after a fast and furious exchange of blows, mostly hooks, Faustino let fly with his right from the hip, and as previously hinted the Kid won't know anything about what happened after that until he reads it some time next week, when he comes too again.

Main interest in last night's main bout, as far as fight fans are now concerned, centers in the fact that Billy Tingle, the Australian, agreed to meet the winner of the De Dios-Carletos battle next Friday night at the Stadium. This ought to be a knuckle party worth going miles to see. Billy is undoubtably good; but there are numerous Missourians in this community who are convinced, after Faustino's recent showings, that it is going to require the service of a real expert in the boxing game to take his number. When Billy stepped into the ring last night to be introduced De Dios and Carletos were putting their gloves on, and the sharps noted that he will have to give away inches in reach when he meets De Dios. Billy's friends are confident that his speed will offset this; but when you mention speed this boy De Dios is right up in the front line, demanding to have his nose counted. If he isn't speedy neither was Potipher's missy.

The main bout on last night's card was not all there was to the show, by several furlongs. The semi-final was in the hands of one Kid Dimple and one Battling Joseph, both being assumed monickers. Dimple is a Filipino and Joseph is a Britisher. Of the two Dimple is much the better scrapper, notwithstanding which it took him six rounds to finish Joseph. The latter gave one of the finest exhibitions of grit and pure, bulldog gameness

JOSEPH GROGGY

Dimple jabbed and punched him until he was silly and groggy, and even groggier than that, but he wouldn't give up. His face was cut to pieces, mostly by Dimple's jabbing left, and several times he was knocked down. But every time (except the last) he was up and at it, trading blow for blow with his rangy opponent. Dimple had so weakened him by successive punches that his blows lacked steam; nevertheless he kept on trying. In the sixth Dimple went after him like a flock of furies, raining blow after blow, until finally Joseph flopped. His seconds, seeing further effort was useless, tossed in a towel. Both boys got a great hand after it was over and there were as many cheers for the valiant loser as for his conqueror.

The best of the prelims was a four round go between Eddie Smith and Battling Kyko. This Smith person handles himself like a real scrapper, and in the second round he had the tough Kyko all but out. The Filipino boy hung on, however, and put up a good fight in the third and fourth sessions. Smith got the decision. Fight fans would like to see Mr. Smith in action again. He is a tall, rangy customer with a lot of speed and style.

A NOISY ONE

The noisiest bout of the evening was between Billy Bernard and Abe Ezra. These boys flailed each other (and the circumambient) with a right good will: Billy with his mouth wide open and Abe with his mane tossing like a roaring lion's. They pounded each other merrily for the full four rounds, with scarcely an instant's let-up. Bernard got the decision.

The first prelim brough G. Columna and Battling Rib together. These boys fought earnestly also, but the Rib, while just as earnest as his adversary was not quite as effective. Columna battered him pretty thoroughly; so thoroughly, in fact, that Rib's seconds tossed in a sponge. It was a good, lively battle while it lasted.

That pair of fighting kids, Willie and Fernandez, furnished the curtain raiser, and after four rounds of lively milling Referee McGrath called it a draw.

Altogether it was a fine card—the best yet offered. One feature that pleased the customers was the celerity with which the bouts were put on. When one pair of scrappers finished the next two were there to enter the ring with their gloves on, ready to start. That sort of thing is what the bugs like.

Dinny Doyle was the official announcer and wore a boiled shirt. Frank McGrath, Dr. O'Hara and Sam Davis referred the bouts, all giving complete satisfaction. Hoiby Gallop tortured a chair at the timekeeper's table, where also sat Freckly Bills, the latter winking mysteriously at the reporters from time to time.

That was about all of moment except that one of the reporters had his shirt spattered with blood when Battling Rib was plastered one in the nose.

TOUSSAINT AND CANAVARRO WIN TENNIS DOUBLES

Favorites Defeat Whitamore And Sturton In Final Contest

In the finals of the Shanghai Doubles championship, played yesterday on the Association courts at the new Majestic hotel, Messrs. Toussaint and Canavarro easily defeated Messrs Whitamore and Sturton in straight sets, 6-2; 6-2 and 6-2.

The winners showed the best tennis all the way through, Toussaint being especially strong. Canavarro was inclined to wildness at first but quickly steadied and like his partner got better as the games progressed.

Despite the one sidedness of the score the games were interesting, and there were flashes of really fine tennis. Toussaint and Canavarro, after they had the contest well in hand, lashed out in great style, both revealing some very fine strokes.

In the play-off of the tie between Omar Rumjahn and Wu Akada the Hongkong man won, 6-2; 8-6; 7-7; 6-0.

Okada was troubled by wildness, being unable to keep his shots on the court, his all 'round play being below the level he exhibited in the first match.

Announce Players In World's Series

(Exclusive China Press)

Chicago, Oct. 4.—Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, commissioner of organised baseball today announced the lists of players eligible to compete in the world's series contests between the New York National league and New York American league teams. The Yankees and Giants are each restricted to 24 players, exclusive of managers and coaches.

BASEBALL TODAY!

There will be a baseball game at the race track grounds this afternoon between the Huron team and a nine made up of players from the rest of the fleet.

This game will mark the last appearance in Shanghai of Scymanski, the great Huron third sacker, "Skee" is leaving for home in the near future, his term of enlistment in the navy having expired.

Both teams have been practicing daily and a fine game is assured. Tackette probably will be on the mound for the Hurons, and Clyde Flowers, the rotund first sacker, will be out there asking 'em where they are goin' as usual.

It will be a good game and baseball fans who want to see Skee in action for the last time should make it a point to be there. No admission will be charged.

'HAVE GO NINGPO MORE FAR' LOSES SOME OF POTENCY

Local Firm Gets Sealing Order For Property There

The time honored and hitherto discouragingly effective explanation for the fleeting debtor—"have go Ningpo more far"—is apt to lose a good deal of its significance following recent activities in that somewhat ambiguous area by Mr. R. T. Bryan, Jr., of the law firm of Davies and Bryan.

Mr. Bryan returned to Shanghai yesterday from Ningpo after securing the sealing up of a block of valuable property in the Chekiang city in connection with a judgment given against a fugitive compradore by the Mixed Court. He did not, however, find the going exactly smooth and is still working for the tying up of other property in Ningpo which was previously sealed by the local Magistrate and then released.

The original case was that of A. F. Thane and Company against Yah Zung-ziang, Tsha Nyien-daung and Tsha Ping-sung. The latter was previously compradore for Thane and Co. and, according to the information filed at the Mixed Court here, formed a bogus company of his own under the name of the first defendant, Yah Zung-ziang. For this concern he executed a contract with his employers for a shipment of kerosene oil. When the oil arrived the market had fallen below the contract price and Tsha informed Thane and Co. that the concern for which he acted had gone out of business. The plaintiffs discovered the fraud and rather than take the matter into court the compradore agreed to pay the loss, amounting to about G.$44,000. The father, the third defendant, guaranteed the payment. After which both father and son left for Ningpo, where the elder is said to be a member of the Chamber of Commerce and one of the local gentry.

It was found impossible to get service by summons so service by publication was obtained and judgment by default was given. The Mixed Court, through the Commissioner of Foreign Affairs here, ordered the Ningpo court, the Shen Pan Ting, to seal up Tsha's property. Mr. Bryan went to Ningpo and appeared before the Shan Pan Ting and addressed the Magistrate in Chinese. Sealing orders were accordingly given for a fine piece of residential property. Mr. Bryan returned to Shanghai and secured sealing orders for further property belonging to the defendant in Ningpo, but when he got back to that city he found that the seals had been removed from the residence originally affected. The Magistrate agreed to the sealing of the additional property but not to the resealing of the original property. For reason he first stated that he had ordered the place unsealed because the plaintiffs had not appeared in person, but later attributed his act to the fact that an error had been found in the order from Shanghai.

Mr. Bryan hopes now to obtain an order for the Chinese authorities to seal up all of the property, the value of which would nearly cover the judgment.

Ex-Premier Kerensky May Be Arrested

Alexander Kerensky

ALEXANDER Kerensky, former Russian Premier, is one of the most prominent of the 22 leaders of the Socialist-Revolutionist Party who are expected to surrender to the Soviet Government in Russia as hostages for those members of their party who were imprisoned after trials in Moscow last Summer. The convicted men are said to have been broken in health by their confinement and the brutal treatment accorded them. To save their lives Kerensky and his associates plan to take their places in prison. Kerensky is suffering from tuberculosis, and imprisonment for ever so short a time would kill him.

Conditions In Italy Are Good, Legation Declares

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Oct. 3.—The following has been handed to Reuter's Agency by the Italian Legation for publication:

In the months of July and August there was a decrease in the rate of exchange of the Italian lira. From 20 lire the dollar has gradually risen to 23-23.35. This does not mean a depression in the Italian economic life. Even the "Times" has shown that the apparent depreciation of the Italian lira coincides with a greater development of Italian Industry.

Under the new Fascist government, Italy sets forth to work. Unemployment is vanishing. The number of unemployed has gone from 500,000 to 250,000, which is a negligible number for a country of 40 million inhabitants. All industrial bonds are strong. The reason, therefore, of the lower rate of exchange of the Italian lira is to be traced to the purchase of cereals, especially of wheat, in the months of June and July.

The new harvest has been copious and these purchases will be reduced with a less expenditure of gold on the side of Italy. Besides, the decline in Italian currency is not confined to Italy. Even the French and Belgian francs have gone down. Political events exert their influence on the economic life of Europe, and the nations that have suffered from the war are not able to stabilise the value of their own money. However, Italian exchange houses have not been affected by the transitory depreciation of the lira.

There has been an increase in business, and the bonds of industrial undertakings have found a lively market. The decline of the lira had as a consequence a rise of price in the industrial field. The proof that the lower rate of exchange of the lira was a transitory phenomenon is given by that fact that in September, having finished the purchase of cereals, the rate of exchange has improved very much and has become the same as it was before July.

Italian economic policy aims at a revival of the commercial activity of the two ports of Trieste and Fiume, which were the natural emporia of Austria and Hungary. Of course, their ancient prosperity cannot be re-established in a few years. Everything, however, is done to minimise the crisis that changed political conditions of Europe have produced.

Trieste is improving its trade market. The recovery of business is marked by a revival of the import commerce with Czecho-Slovakia. During 1922 the merchandise transported by Czecho-Slovakia via Trieste totalled 126,179 tons, with an average of 10,523 tons per month. The statistics of the current year show an average of 17,106 tons per month, that is, the Czecho-Slovakia Transit Trade via Trieste has almost doubled.

Even in the transit of passengers there is a noteworthy increase in the port of Trieste. According to the statistics of 1922 the number of foreigners who landed at Trieste was 898 and those embarked in the same town was 2586. The figures are important, for in the same year, the number of foreigners landed in the ports of Genoa, Naples, Palermo and Messina was 10,977, and those embarked were 12,743. Trieste becomes a port of departure for the Polish Jew emigration.

DAMAGE CASE AGAINST CAR OWNER'S ENDS

Court Considers Woman's Claim Against Central Garage

Judgment in the case in which Mrs. M. S. Bialokoz, a Russian woman, is claiming Tls. 7,500 damages, and medical and loss of wages renumeration from the Central Garage as a result of an accident on Avenue Joffre in which she sustained severe injuries, was taken under advisement by Sir Skinner Turner in the British Supreme Court yesterday afternoon at the conclusion of the testimony.

The plaintiff was represented by Mr. Leonard G. Husar of Rodger and Husar, and the defendant company by Mr. R. N. Macleod.

Mr. Macleod, addressing the Court for the defence, said the facts in the case were probably fairly clear from the evidence given. Defendant's case was that there were, on Avenue Joffre at the time, anywhere near the scene of the accident, three motor-cars proceeding all in the same direction, of which defendant's was the first. On the left-hand side of the road, also going in the same direction, were the rickshas of plaintiff and her husband and nothing else. Defendant's car was proceeding east in a perfectly ordinary way going about 20 miles an hour—which was perfectly reasonable. The car approached the rickshas about the place as stated by the plaintiff and was proposing to pass the rickshas in the usual way when the front ricsha was seen to pull across the road at a very sharp angle; he was going to a house in a passage-way on the right-hand side of the road. The chauffeur immediately put on the brakes and almost at once the car started to skid, and the front of the car swung round to the left but turned a complete circle and the off back corner of the car struck the ricsha, which was then almost at right angles across the road, on the tram lines. The ricsha was upset and the passenger thrown to the ground. The chauffeur got out, and one of the occupants of one of the other cars got out, but they had been unable to trace who it was. Plaintiff was assisted by Mr. Healey and Mr. McDermott to the house to which she was proceeding. Plaintiff, at the time, drew attention to the purse and money lying on the ground and directed these two gentlemen to the house to which she wanted to go. The chauffeur took plaintiff's husband and a native policeman to the French Police Station to report; and that was the whole story as far as defendant's knew it.

QUESTION OF NEGLIGENCE

Proceeding, Mr. Macleod said that defendants had said that the hoods of both rickshas were up, as well as that of the motor-car, that they saw no signal of any kind given by the plaintiff; defendants never even saw her hand. Counsel did not know that that was of very great importance, because from plaintiff's own story it was quite clear that the signal she gave was given at the last moment. The defence was not merely that there was contributory negligence. Plaintiff must prove negligence on the part of the defendant and had to show (1) that the car was driven at an improper speed (2) failure of the chauffeur to signal his intention to pass the ricsha—and defendant's admitted that no horn was blown, so plaintiff would have to satisfy the Court that it was negligence not to blow the horn; or (3) that the chauffeur ignored the signals of the plaintiff that the ricsha was going to cross. On that counsel submitted there was no evidence except the one, already mentioned, given at the last moment, and on the evidence before the Court it was plain that the brakes were put on at once; so it was difficult to see how there was negligence on that point; and lastly, plaintiff alleged that defendant's car crossed over to the right-hand side of the road when it should have maintained its course, in which case no accident would have occurred. Counsel did not quite know what was meant by the last-mentioned allegation, but, on plaintiff's own story, he thought that allegation must be taken to have gone, because it was clear on the evidence that as soon as the ricsha turned something was done on which the car began to skid.

CLEAR ROAD

The only possible negligence, said Mr. Macleod, was that of driving too fast. Defendants said that the road was clear, the driver had nothing in front of him and he had nothing to warn him or draw his attention to the probability of the ricsha turning across in front of the car. In other words, driving at 20 miles an hour on Avenue Joffre at that time was perfectly reasonable and could not be called negligent. The second part of the case was that the ricsha did something which was very unusual.

Mr. C. J. White, manager of the defendant company, said the brakes of the car, an Overland Touring car, were in order on 28th March—the day of the accident. The speed limit in the French Concession was 15 miles per hour, and, in the extra Concession, where the accident occurred, 25 miles an hour. The first witness heard of the accident was on receiving a letter from a Russian lawyer on May 8.

Sir Skinner—Did the chauffeur not report this accident to you?

Witness—No.

Sir Skinner—I suppose it is his duty to report it?

Witness—Chauffeurs don't report accidents as a rule, because I would investigate the matter and if I find it is their fault I punish them. They keep it to themselves, as a rule.

Mr. R. G. McDermott, of the Texas Co., said he did not actually observe the accident. The first thing he saw was the ricsha skid across the road and Mr. Healey, who was with him, exclaimed "There's a smash-up." The skid must have been after the collision, being the effect of the blow of the car. On reaching the scene of the accident a gentleman was picking up the lady, and they told him to get the number of the car and they would take care of the lady. The latter was badly dazed, but witness did not think she was unconscious. As they started to assist her off the street she said something to the other gentleman about picking up some small change she had dropped. She leaned very heavily on their arms, but she was able to put her feet to the ground. She herself pointed out the house to which she wanted to go.

CHAUFFEUR'S EVIDENCE

The chauffeur was next called. He said that he blew his horn at the corner of Route Cardinal Mercier. He approached plaintiff's ricsha and when about a distance of one Chinese house and a half away the ricsha turned suddenly to the right. He immediately applied his brakes and, as it was raining and the road slippery, the car skidded and the back part of the car hit the back part of the ricsha. Witness's car skidded towards the left and the ricsha towards the right. He saw no signal from the ricsha. Had a signal been given by the ricsha no accident would have happened.

Mr. Macleod—Was there anything else you could do to prevent this accident?

Witness—No, except if there had been a signal from the ricsha.

Following Mr. Husar's address to the court in which he asked for damages in the amount claimed because, he asserted the evidence showed clearly that the chauffeur had been negligent in driving the car as set out in their statement of claim and that Mrs. Bialokoz had received her injuries through no fault of her own—she had taken all precautions—but through the fault of the defendant company's employee, the case was adjourned. It is expected Sir Skinner will give judgment within two or three days.

Couzens Would Modify U.S. Dry Laws

UNITED States Senator James Couzens, of Michigan, former automobile partner of Henry Ford, is fighting for the modification of the Volstead dry laws. Opposed by the Anti-Saloon League, but backed by the American Legion Posts of his State, he is demanding beer with a 5 per-cent alcoholic content.

SEIZE ARMS ON PRESIDENT SHIPS AT HONGKONG

Further indications of the extensive smuggling of arms into the Colony are provided by a number of large seizures made within the last few days. By far the largest haul was made on the President McKinley and an order was made by the Magistrate for the confiscation of:

- 8 Mausers.
- 13 Luger pistols.
- 20 Spanish revolvers.
- 3740 Mauser ammunition rounds.
- 2464 Luger ammunition rounds.
- 2800 Smith and Wesson cartridges.
- 17 Luger magazines (long).
- 5 Luger magazines (short).
- 19 Mauser clips.
- 18 Luger loading machines.
- 6 Luger stocks.
- 6 Pieces spare parts.

Another lot, comprising six double-barrelled shot guns and 13 revolvers and pistols of different makes, was seized by Sergeant Carey on the same steamer in an extensive search carried out on the night of September 23 as the vessel was lying alongside the wharf. Confident that there were more arms than those found in the possession of two Chinese members of the crew (now in custody), the Water Police searched every part of the liner in the evening and made the discoveries enumerated above.

The arrival of the President Wilson was the occasion for another search and from different parts of the vessel were unearthed 158 Mausers and 26,700 rounds of ammunition. No arrests were made, but an application will be made for the confiscation of these arms in due course.

Last night Sergeant Mist visited two sampans lying at their moorings in Wanchai Bay and took from the holds, where they were carefully secreted, 26 revolvers and 26,700 rounds of ammunition. In consequence, two sampan men and two sampan women are being held in custody. It is believed that these arms comprised part of a consignment which smugglers succeeded in transferring from some incoming liner.

Co-operation Between North And South

(By Dr. Gilbert Reid in the International Journal)

In a previous number, we had an editorial on "Plans for National Unification;" the main object, like that of the International Institute, is to advocate peace for the world and for China and devise means for bringing about this peace. The present situation is so urgent that we cannot but discuss again National Unification. Whether unification will appear, or whether it will be harder to bring about in the future is still a doubtful question. According to some reports internal peace is more hopeless than ever. General Li Yuan Hung's arrival at Shanghai has much to do with the success or failure of peace proposals.

By special intelligence received from Shanghai, a news correspondent had an interview with General Li with a view to ascertaining his opinion on the present situation. General Li said: "I advocate union by peace but oppose union by force. I have always stood by the purpose to deliver the country from destruction and I earnestly hope that the various parties will understand this so as to save our country by united effort." The correspondent interrogated saying, "In case peaceful union cannot be brought about and strife between North and South cannot be avoided, what then?" General Li said: "Judging from past experience in internal strife this calamity is always due to the negligence of discipline and to the violation of law. If law be upheld and discipline be observed, the difficulty will certainly be much lessened. For my own part, I wish to discuss the whole matter on the basis of facts. I wish discipline to be esteemed and law to be observed by all. If General Tsao Kun and his party will uphold the law and pay due respect to discipline, I will favor inviting them to a conference along with others. I do not like pro-this or anti-that. My action is solely for the safety of the country."

PURE AND GOOD

Judging from the above, we know for a certainty that General Li's mind is pure and good, and his words agree with his thoughts. Shall we not, therefore, esteem his person? But at present we cannot overlook the bearings of his visit to Shanghai on unification, or whether his arrival at Shanghai may not be an obstacle to plans for peace and to the best way to uphold the law.

Under present state of affairs, I presume that General Li's going to Shanghai is to join the anti-Chihli party, but at the same time he has lost the chance of keeping close connection with the Chihli party and therefore it is not the proper way of bringing about national union. The proper way for him was to stay in Tientsin, awaiting a satisfactory compromise which might bear good results. Moreover his proceeding to Shanghai may not facilitate even his keeping in close relations with the anti-Chihli party. In this connection, General Li has made a mistake in listening to the advice of others. Apart from one small party there is no one to look with favor on General Li's good proposals. The Kuo Min Tang and the South-western provinces do not recognise him as President. They will not recognise him even as party leader, because his resuming office last year was through the support of the Chihli militarists. Since they did not recognise him as President last year, there is no doubt they will not give their recognition this year.

Besides the Kuo Min Tang, there is the Anfu party which has not given him any substantial support. If General Li had had the intention to unite with the Anfu party, his stay in Tientsin would have been better than to go to Shanghai. The Mukden party is also a strong military party and has not shown any inclination towards giving him support. If General Li had desired to join with the Mukden party, it would also have been better for him to have stayed in Tientsin.

BAD MOVE

Beside the three big parties, there are several wellknown persons, who may make use of General Li's coming to Shanghai as a factor to ruin the peace treaty between Kiangsu and Chekiang.

In view of the above, although General Li has cherished good thoughts, and his object is to uphold the law work solely for the safety of the country, yet his going to Shanghai will do more harm than good. Not only the Chihli party and the anti-Chihli party cannot arrive at a satisfactory settlement, but even outsiders will be less disposed to methods of concord. In a word, it is a pity that General Li was first compelled to leave Peking for Tientsin, and it is now a pity that he has left Tientsin for Shanghai. Considering the expressions General Li has made and the object which he holds, all Chinese and foreigners must sing his praises. Although General Li's expressions are in such an ardent manner, yet few persons will listen to him. Who will cooperate with him, in accomplishing this great task? It is all due to the fact that each party has its own way and will not sacrifice itself to meet the wishes of the people. This is a great obstacle to National Peace.

If Dr. Sun Yat-Sen becomes President, the anti-Sun party will be sure to oppose him. Thus when General Li and Mr. Hsu Shih-ch'ang became presidents, those who were not their followers used their utmost efforts to oppose them. Under such conditions, unification is hard to reach. However, I sincerely hope that all party leaders will for once sacrifice their present position and come down to a level with the people, making no distinction among parties, but all uniting in a conference to solve the present situation. All should follow General Li's proposal to come to the rescue of the country and all should observe the rule of law. This is the first step for settling the present question. The place selected for calling this conference should be of easy access to both North and South. Peking or Tientsin is not a proper place for Southerners and Foochow and Canton are not suitable to the North. The aforementioned places are inconvenient to both sides. Chefoo might be more suitable as compared with other places in certain respects, but it is not a good center.

However I sincerely hope that General Li's object may be carried out and the differences of various parties may be amicably settled. Then peaceful union will appear and the great task of unification be achieved. I wish that internal strife be done away with so as to cultivate a brotherly feeling among all. If the five races be united and they render mutual assistance to each other, what difficulty will there be in saving the country?

Impressions Of Korea

YESTERDAY AND TODAY

The years ago the visitors to Korea traveling from Fusan through the entire length of the peninsula could not fail to be depressed by the very evident attitude of dissatisfaction of the Koreans and foreigners alike, towards things political and governmental. This attitude was so well known, that the delegates to the World's Sunday School Convention in Japan were not encouraged to go through Korea, but were headed as far as possible by Cook's towards China and India says the Japan Chronicle. Dark whisperings, mutterings and forebodings were the order of the day in Korea. Restraint and repression were in the very atmosphere. One felt as one must be on one's good behaviour, with a passport ever ready in one's outside pocket, if one were to traverse the chalk-line to Mukden without a slip. And what a relief it was to get to Mukden!

To-day the visitor to Korea is impressed very differently from what he was three years ago. To-day the whole spirit of the country seems to be changing. The common people are holding up their heads and smiling. At Fusan an old grandame was seen contentedly buying her spaghetti at a Japanese shop and stopping to chat amicably over the transaction. Another was buying matches in the same friendly way. Of course one or the other had become bilingual—perhaps both. To-day many Korean men are clogging around in Japanese "geta" and finding them "convenient."

At Ouseiri young Japanese are frequenting the reading room of a Kordan pastor who welcomes them gladly. In this instance it does not seem to be a question of policy on his part, but one of geniuine brotherly interest.

In Seoul, the missionaries say the Japanese policemen are their good friends, and help them very much in their work.

At Changsen, a Korean hotelkeeper met his guests in cotton kimono and geta. It was wellnigh impossible to believe he wasn't Japanese, for with the Japanese clothes he seemed to have donned also the characteristic Japanese swagger and bearing. In the evening when he appeared to his guests in his own native Korean clothes, he was transformed. Surely clothes are the making of a man!

From all indications contentment looms larger than it did three years ago. The common people of both races are getting together. When differences are forgotten, surely they have much in common with one another. In a generation or two hence it will be difficult to distinguish between them.

Another different sort of change noted today in Korea was the change in fashion of the headgear of Korean men. Three years ago the black, open-work horse-hair hat was in evidence To-day, only the old men are to be seen wearing this ancient and honorable head covering. Three years ago in Seoul, whole shops were given over to the transport of this airy kind of chapeau, but today these shops have been relegated, when they do persist, to back streets where they meet the demands of their everdwindling customers.

"Toppers" are out of style also in London. The new Premier doesn't wear one! The Korean variety of topper is tied under the chin, and built high to accommodate the Korean gentleman's top-knot style of hair-dressing. The married man allowed his hair to grow long and then wound it up into tight knot four or five inches high. And sometimes he surmounted it with a pearl pin. When it rained the Korean gentleman topped his topper with another hat—a miniature paper umbrella affair which fitted the hat like a glove.

But toll the knell! Top hats and horse-hair toppers with their attendant paper umbrellas, are passing. The young men, married or otherwise, have cropped heads, and wear foreign straw hats of a deadly similarity to mediocrity. The Korean flapper is no longer warned by hair-dressing and hats to keep "hands off." All are legitimate prey.

Shades of the passing Korean Fashions! Soon you too, will join your motley brethren of the past, and be visible only in the precious museums. Long may these live to be the solace of those who cherish individuality in dress in the nations.

Mammy Songs Now Said To Be Hellenic

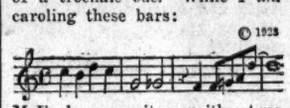
Modern Syncopation Akin to Greek Odes Declare Singers

Who'd have thought that mammy songs, which originated way-down south in Dixie where the pickanninies always have been crooned to sleep by the mellowest melodies on earth, could be traced back to Homer and those other high-brow shining lights of Grecian times?

But according to Joe McFarlane and John Palace, who sing in vaudeville for a living and delve in Greek poetry just for fun outside working hours, this is true.

"Pure Greek, that's what the mammy songs like 'Carolina Mammy' are," Palace insisted. "Trochaic and Iambic and all that sort of thing, classical in the extreme, and just crammed full of sheer, heart-touching beauty.

"We have tried the experiment of combining syncopated singing with the recitation of the lyrics of a trochaic ode. While I am caroling these bars:



McFarlane recites with true Greek gestures:

"Carolina Mammy,
I'm longing for you—"

"It works, too, proves my point and gets us thundering applause."

Town Officials In Phillipines Can't Be Joiners

Executive Order Bars All From Secret Lodges

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Manila, Sept. 30.—Municipal officials of the Philippines hereafter are to be prohibited from joining organisations except those of a religious, athletic or purely recreational nature.

The executive bureau, with the approval of the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, yesterday issued a circular to this effect with a view to guarding against affiliation of members of local police forces with organisations which are likely to interfere with their duties.

All masonic lodges, secret societies and labor or mutual aid unions are included in the ban, executive officials explained in connection with the circular. In such organisations, it is stated, members are inclined, in accordance with secret vows or rituals, to enforce the law less rigorously wherever their colleagues are affected unfavorably.

"Bluebeard's Eighth Wife"

According to the reports from India and Singapore Shanghai theater lovers are to have a thoroughly enjoyable time during the three weeks the Forbes Russell Comedy Company are here. As already announced the Company are opening their season here with the famous London play, "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife." From all accounts the play is decidedly clever, intensely amusing, and although there is a pyjamas-bed room scene and more than one phase which might have two meanings—or several—it is, taking it altogether, nothing but a very delightful comedy where virtue triumphs in the end.

The out-standing figure in the play is John Brown, who has divorced six wives and buried one. The other two important roles are those of "Court Hubert de Lunancourt" and "Mona." The part of "Mona" is taken by Miss Niqua Lewis, who was seen in Shanghai four or five years ago. According to the Indian criticism Miss Lewis is a most magnetic young woman and one of the finest artistes seen in the East for a long time.

The play promises to be exceptionally interesting, and should prove a great success in Shanghai. The plans opened several days ago at Moutrie's, and are rapidly filling.

Exchange Market

In their weekly report on the exchange market, Messrs. Maitland, Fearon and Brand write as follows:

Exchange. — After touching 31⅝d. the London price for "Spot" silver, influenced by Indian buying is today quoted 32¼d. i.e. 3-16d. higher than last week. The quotation for two months forward at 31⅝d. is 3-16d. down and the difference between ready and forward is ⅜d. Our official rate for T.T. on London touched 3-1½d. on the 2nd inst. but was down to last week's closing quotation 3-1d. before the end of the day. Exchange business in connection with "Imports" and "Exports" has been very small, and fluctuations have been the result of the efforts of our local Gold Dealers to cover they oversold position in Gold T.T. in the process, one or two failures are reported on the Gold Bar market They still have a very large amount to cover against which there is very little visible cover forthcoming other than sales of silver for forward delivery, and our market is based on the forward quotation for silver; the ready price being dominated by speculators from the "Indian Bazaars" who appear to be short of silver in London but have very extensive stocks in India. We closed with a weak tendency.

Our stocks of silver show improvement, which with fresh arrivals of silver due, and the fall in the Tael Dollar rate should continue.

Our stocks of silver are reported as follows:

Sycee and Bar Silver Tls. 29,488,000 an increase of Tls. 1,755,000.

Chinese and Mexican Dollars $39,270,000 an increase of $1,660,000.

Estimated value Tls. 53,762,000 as against Tls. 67,687,000 held at this time last year.

"The perfection of art can only be attained by first perfecting the instruments therefor."—Sayings of Confucius.
EXTRACT FROM EXPERT REPORT:
"Having visited most of the cement factories of Great Britain, America and Europe, I am in a position to form an opinion of the relative merits and faults of each.....but my experiences lead me to the conclusion that 'pride of place' must unquestionably be given to the Holderbank Factory in Switzerland .....In design and construction it is a model without rival in any country." W. H. Brown, A. M. I. Mech. E., leading authority in England on cement manufacturing.
The Wisdom of the ancient Sage and the technical experiences of a modern authority on cement manufacturing have guided us to instal a set of machinery in our Lungwha Works which is an exact model of the one used by the Holderbank factory, Switzerland, and supplied by the original patentees with numerous latest improvements. The cement we are now supplying our customers is the product of that "perfect instrument."

LANTERN LECTURE ON "THEOSOPHY" DELIVERED HERE

The first of a series of lantern-slide lectures on "The First Principles of Theosophy" was given Thursday evening at the Theosophical Hall by Mr. A. Horne, B.Sc., "The Meaning of Life" being taken as the subject of the introductory lecture. The lecturer took the subject from the scientific and the Theosophic point of view, and compared them, saying that Science and Theosophy were not mutually antagonistic terms. Theosophy broadens the scope of its observations by not confining itself to observations made through the physical senses and with physical instruments alone, having at its disposal methods of observation that are ultra-physical. Its "Universe" is therefore not only the physical universe of the orthodox scientist, but includes as well, as an extension to that, the ultra-physical world. The same methods however, apply in both. No observations are considered as certainties until they have been tested and corroborated by a sufficient number of independent investigators; and we have a record of such investigations that have been carried on for thousands of years. Those who are competent to do so are moreover carrying them on today, and we thus have, as the foundation of Theosophy, a long series of observations of laws and phenomena belonging to our Universe.

An example of how Science and Theosophy are mutually complementary is afforded us in the question of evolution. While Science studies the evolution of form, Theosophy busies itself not only with that but also with the more important question of the evolution of life, the form being seen to be only the means through which the life finds manifestation. Now Science looks upon matter and force to be two fundamental units of the Universe, with life as the interaction of the two, while Theosophy, while accepting the facts of Science, draws her own conclusions, because of her access to a wide range of facts that are beyond the field of the scientist.

Theosophy says that Life is a form of energy acting in conjunction with ultra-physical matter, and this Life evolves, that is, it expands—unfolds. Within every germ of life are involved all the latent capacities that will one day burst forth into actual powers. The germs of genius lie latent within every human being, and as the life goes from phase to phase, more and more of this inherent capacity finds self-expression, till everything that was involved becomes evolved, and the process of evolution is at an end. Life however, is not confined merely to the human and animal kingdoms. We go back to the vegetable and mineral kingdom as well, and trace the evolution of life through mineral forms, vegetable forms, animal forms, human forms, and superhuman forms.

As we study the evolution of form according to Science, we find one gloomy element prevailing, and that is, the terrible wastefulness of the process. The whole living Universe seems to be composed of beasts of prey. Nature takes pains to build up forms of life, only to have them destroyed the next instant by those forms that are more powerful.

From the scientific ponit of view, there is no escape from this hopeless outlook on life, but the Theosophist sees what is going on beyond the scenes. He sees, for instance, that behind the evolution of form is going on the unfoldment of Life, and in order that this unfoldment may be carried to its culminating point, it must go through a range of forms which are also on the upward path towards perfection. As the form evolves, the Life within it finds greater and greater self-expression, till, when the perfect form has been reached, the Life pours itself out with a fulness, a beauty, that is truly divine.

A number of interesting lantern-slides illustrated the lecture.

The lecturer announced that the next lantern-slide lecture of the series would be on Nov. 1, and would be entitled: "The Occult History of Nations."

Lady Anne is a White Leghorn, owned by Lyle Funk, of Shirley, Illinois. She is a scion of real nobility in hendom and was born in an incubator.

Cotton Reports

In their weekly report on the Shanghai Cotton market, Messrs. A. B. Rosenfeld and Son write as follows:

China Cotton:—The market has been fairly active during the past week and a further material advance has been established, with a more general interest on the part of local Spinners. Receipts from the interior are increasing daily. At the close of the market yesterday, the predominating sentiment still seems to be in favor of higher prices but the uncertainty which has been felt regarding the militaristic outlook for the near future has prevented the broadening of speculation and if operations could be analysed, it would probably be found that a good portion of the business consisted of the evening-up of old transactions and a fair volume of switches in addition to moderate buying by mills and exporters.

From the above it will be seen that whatever views are entertained as to the ultimate course of prices, a conservative policy appears to be desirable for the immediate future. The situation continues to hinge on the developments of Mid-Americans and Indians, coupled with the attitude of interior movements.

Yarn.—We have no change to report in the position of the local yarn market, prices ruling the same as last week. At the close, the undertone of the market was steady to firm. Business for export has been booked, some 4,000 to 5,000 bales in all counts at ruling prices. From present indications, we look for steady markets in the future.

SPUNT'S REPORT

Messrs. J. Spunt and Company write as follows in their weekly report on the cotton market.

China Cotton—Our market manifested firmness throughout the past week and prices advanced about Tls. 0.50 for spot and for future deliveries about Tls. 0.75 per picul higher than the previous level, with a tendency at the close to further advances. The demand in the aggregate for the time being is greater than the supply, or in other words, there are more buyers than sellers which circumstance naturally engenders an upward movement in the rates. The arrivals from the interior whether such be small or large are as yet insufficient to meet the requirments of terms of contracts made in the previous months and Spinners, Chinese in particular, find difficulties in obtaining even small quantities for spot deliveries, notwithstanding their willingness to pay a premium on the current prices. The reason for such meagre receipts from the interior may be ascribed to heavy buying on the part of the mills, adjacent to the cotton growing districts at prices favorable to the farmers and which procedure in deflecting the outflow of cotton to this port also tends to encourage interior holders to enhance the values of their stocks by reason of the pressing demands reaching them for immediate deliveries, as most of the Chinese Mills are devoid of sufficient supplies wherewith to keep their spindles running. None of the market Firm.

Taking The Blinkers Off Justice

SHANGHAI'S annual crime wave has achieved an excellent start. In fact in one particular division of crime—armed robbery—1923's end will see last year's record smashed to smithereens. Last year the Commissioner of Police in his annual report stated that 66 armed robberies had been committed in the International Settlement. In five of the cases five persons—two of them policemen doing their duty—were killed by the armed robbers.

So far this year—including the armed highway robbery reported in today's issue—66 armed robberies have been committed and the outlaws still have November and December and most of October in which to operate.

In 1921 there were 142 robberies reported. Last year 228 were reported, an increase of 76. In 1921 9 arms cases were before the Mixed Court. Last year there were 34. In addition last year's police reports show that there were 221 burglaries, 29 cases of godown-breaking, 39 cases of housebreaking and 149 cases of obtaining money by threats, most of which had their genesis in the possession of arms by the ill-doers.

Last year four foreigners and 13 Chinese were murdered, including two Chinese constables who were killed fighting armed robbers. Five other were killed by armed robbers.

The figures could be quoted by the colmun but we have cited enough to bring our point to the fore.

Why all this crime in which revolvers and pistols provide the criminal agency?

A glance over the records of the Mixed Court would seem to tell the story. In the arms case that have come before it the Mixed Court has given the offenders light sentences. A Chinese is arrested by the police in possession of 14 revolvers and 500 rounds of ammunition and is given two months in jail. At the end of two months he gets out and immediately goes back into the arms business.

In Honskong they handle the situation a little differently. A recent regulation in the Crown Colony provides that a maximum sentence of 10 years at hard labor and flogging may be given to any breaker of the law against possession of arms and ammunition without a permit or license.

Shanghai needs a little Hong kong logic in dealing with arms cases. The Mixed Court is altogether too light on offenders. The blinkers on Justice need to be removed far enough so that the Magistrates and Assessors can get a bird's-eye view of the criminal situation of the future if the present practice goes on. As long as gun-smugglers can get off with one or two months in jail when they are caught with small arsenals, they are willing to take the chance again. If they were severely punished they would at least give the subject more thought, and very probably a large portion of, at least, the small gun-smuggling now going on would be eradicated.

As long as Chinese found in possession of arms are allowed to continue in business just so long will the armed robbers be able to secure revolvers and automatics with which to carry on their murderous careers.

It's up to the Mixed Court!

Turtles are very tenacious of life. Some have been known to live for 8 months after their brains were removed. Their only rivals are some birds we know around Shanghai.

Since tomorrow is Sunday we may as well inform the world that it's a wonderful thing to have one day's rest in seven. All we need now is another day to get over it.

DRYING THEIR WINGS

The moon's a cottage with a door.
Some folks can see it plain.
Look, you may catch a glint of light,
A sparkle through the pane,
Showing the place is brighter still
Within, though bright without.
There, at a cosy open fire
Strange babes are grouped about.
The children of the wind and tide—
The urchins of the sky,
Drying their wings from storms and things
So they again can fly.

A Peking Temple Off The Beaten Track

BY JUI FEI-SAN
(In Peking Leader)

The Mohammedan Temple in the Niu Chieh, in the far southeast corner of the Chinese city, is not on the regular tourists' roster of temples. And it is strange that it should not be, for it is one of the most interesting—and in many ways, one of the most impressive of the temples of Peking. We went for the sundown service. Our rickshaw boy who is a Mohammedan, and proud of it, took us.

Most people in Peking know in a passing way that there are some ten thousands of Mohammedans in the city, that these people claim to be direct descendants of the great prophet of Islam and that they hold themselves a bit aloof from their Chinese neighbors.

When one comes into the Mohammedan section of the city, one must take the fact that these people are of a slightly different race largely on faith. Outwardly—in dress and feature—the Pekingese Mohammedan cannot easily be distinguished from his Buddhist or Toaist or Christian or atheist neighbor. Yet one is aware of some difference.

It seems to be largely a difference of manner. There is a greater aggressiveness in the manner of the Mohammedan. It is not an unpleasant assertiveness but simply a greater awareness of being alive than one usually associates with the Chinese. There is a cheerfulness that is positive, rather than a placid good-nature. The children are even merry. As you go down the street, they hold up their little thumbs in emphasis as they call out "How-ti! How-ti!" They do not beg. Among the men, one is struck by the number of beards—rather longer and thicker beards than the one usually sees.

The temple itself is disappointing at first. You expect to see something different from the other temples around Peking. But you find no domes, no minarets—just the usual curved-roofed buildings with yellow tiles, built around a typically Chinese courtyard. There are even some of the familiar temple trappings—a large bronze incense burner before the entrance to the main building, two sacred tablets with a carving of twin dragons and a pearl.

Children in great numbers followed us into the temple and did not leave us until they were ordered away by one of the temple keepers just as the services began.

From one of the side buildings came sounds of pouring water, and our rickshaw boy who had now become our very serious guide told us that the worshippers were bathing there. This is one of the laws of the faith, every worshipper of Allah must present himself clean before the altar of his temple.

The largest building in the enclosure is the main temple. Its doors face the east and the altar is at the end. When you enter, you are stunned for a minute. The familiar temple roofs, the courtyards, the people in Chinese dress lead you to expect the usual temple interior. Of course, you know that you are not in a Buddhist temple, and yet somehow or other, by the time you have come through the outer court, past the sacred tablets and the incense burner, you expect to see a high-ceilinged room and a large Buddha, walled about by elaborate symbols of worship. In contrast, the temple strikes you as almost bare. There are no idols, nothing that is garish, grotesque or spectacular—unless the impression of great solemn distance that is created by the low arched room is spectacular.

It is a large low room, with dull red wooden arches, inscribed elaborately with Sanskrit quotations from the Mohammedan scriptures. There are no Chinese characters, for the Mohammedan scriptures are not allowed to be translated.

The room is completely bare,—just the matted floor and the arched ceiling hung here and there with lanterns that light the room for the last service of the day—the one that is held after the sun has gone down.

At the far end of the room—it seems hundreds of feet away because the room is so low and so wrapped in shadows—there is an altar in a rounded bay of windows. The altar does not contain an idol. Only the Koran, the sacred book of Mohommed, is there. We could not see the book. We had not scrubbed ourselves and could not venture to cross the matted floor. But our guide told us that the book was there.

It was a little before six, and the golden light from the setting sun was coming in through the altar windows. It penetrated a little way into the dim archways of the room, and was lost in shadows.

It would seem at first that there was design in the placing of the altar in this way, facing directly to the east so that these golden rays from the setting sun would stream in upon it at the close of each day. But it is not the sun that determines the placing of this unidoltrous altar. It faces east because every worshipper must face directly west, in the direction of Mecca, the city of the Mohammedan prohet. Such is the Mohammedan law, and from every corner of the globe where there are Mohammedans, there temples which, like this one, face the holy city. In China these temples catch the light of the sun as it goes down. In Northern Africa the sunlight plays upon the worshippers just as they rise from their prayers at dawn.

At six o'clock, one of the temple keeper banished the group of children. Then from outside, there came the wailing notes of a low, minor chant. We looked out and saw the Muezzin, the crier, in a long robe and white turban, standing solemnly before the temple door, facing Mecca and calling the worshippers to prayer. This is the man who in a temple that is typically Mohammedan outside as well as in, stands in the minaret and calls to the faithful five times every day.

In a few minutes the worshippers filed in—some in turbans, some in little conical hats which show that these men have fulfilled the last of the Five Pillars of the Faith and have made their pilgrimage to Mecca. All the worshippers were men. A woman can reach the Mohammedan heaven only through her husband.

Just at the edge of the mat, the men left their shoes. They walked silently across the room and knelt down, each in his separate place upon the floor. All of them faced the altar, and they sat quite silently, in prayer, frequently bowing low so that their heads touched the floor.

The priest came in. He went to the altar, knelt down, bowed low. When he stood up, all the worshippers arose and came up to the altar. They stood facing it in long rows and the chanting service began, sometimes all chanting together, sometimes the priest chanting alone and the worshippers kneeling and bowing to the ground.

It was a short service.—perhaps ten minutes. After it was over, the worshippers went back to their places on the mat and resumed their silent prayers. Everything was completely quiet. The rays of the sun still penetrated a little way into the room, throwing into silhouette a few of the turbaned figures, kneeling on their prayer mats.

Five times a day, a Mohammedan does worship. This is the second Pillar of the Faith. Wherever he may be—in the marketplace, on the desert, in his home, in the temple—just before sunrise, at high noon, in the late afternoon as the sun is growing golden, just after sunset and when night shuts in—a Mohammedan faces Mecca and kneels down to repeat his prayers. One prayer in particular he repeats over and over: "There is no God but Allah, and Mohammed is the Prophet of Allah." This is the most important prayer of Islam and the repeating of it is the First Pillar of the Faith.

The sun was almost at the horizon when we left the temple. Coming through the city it began to rain and the rays of the sun shining under the clouds cast a vivid double rainbow that spanned the eastern sky. We stopped at the gate to the Tartar City and climbed the wall to watch the sun go down. After all the color had gone out of the sky, we went home. Coming up Hatamen Street, I was vividly aware of the fact that at the temple we had just left. Muezzin was calling in a minor voice to a handful of silent men to come and kneel down facing Mecca, and say the last prayer of the day.

Figures Of Speech

"CHESTNUT"

Probably everybody knows what a "chestnut" is, but the the origin of the term may not be known. There are, in fact, various stories to tell why a stale joke, an oft-repeated tale, is called a "chestnut." Here is one of the best known:

In "The Broken Sword," an old melodrama by William Dillon, Captain Xavier is forever telling the same joke, with variations. He was telling about one of his exploits, connected with a cork tree, when Pablo corrected him. "A chestnut tree, you mean, captain." "Bah!" replied the captain, "I mean a cork tree." "A chestnut tree," insisted Pablo. "I must know better than you," said the captain; "it was a cork tree, I say." "A chestnut," persisted Pablo; "I have heard you tell the joke twenty-seven times, and I am sure it was a chestnut."

Latest Interview With Marshal Tsao Kun

BY DR. GILBERT REID

Through the courtesy of the former Governor, Tsao Jui, whom I saw at Tientsin on Friday, August 31, arrangements were made for me to see his older brother at Paoting, Marshal Tsao Kun. The day was Tuesday, September the 11th, the day after the preliminary election for President and the day before the farcical attempt was made to carry out this election. This was indeed a most interesting occasion to see the temper of one standing as candidate for President of the Republic of China as compared with candidates in the United States. The difference was a striking contrast. American candidates for the Presidency or any other important office are kept constantly informed of the result of the election campaign, and are usually more or less nervous and excited. Not so the Chief candidate for highest office in China. Marshal Tsao was placid and unaffected by the events of the day. It shows how different is Chinese disposition from that of nervous, rushing, strenuous, high-pressure Americans. Perhaps after all Americans can learn something from the Orient.

Of the two I was the more nervous, for this was the first time I had met Marshal Tsao. Moreover I had just met some of his subordinates and had not altogether pleased them with my straightforward remarks on the need of the hour and so was uncertain as to what I should say or leave unsaid in the presence of the great man. I soon found myself at ease, as the Marshal did not present himself in grand mandarin robes of olden days or in the imposing military attire of the new generation, but in plain every-day foreign dress of the treaty-port trader and teacher. We were equally unimposing and so did not impose on one another, but spoke to each other as friend with friend. I had at different times talked with President (or ex-President) Li Yuan-hung, ex-President Hsu Shih-chang, First Provisional President Dr. Sun Yat-sen, ex-Premier Marshal Tuan Chi-jui, Marshal Chang Tso-lin and Marshal Wu Pei-fu, and so I was mentally making comparisons during the hour's conversation which Marshal Tsao Kun so kindly granted to me. For once my distinguished host did most of the talking, and if I managed at all to make a favourable impression it was because I proved to be a good listener. I thought it wiser to save time by bringing forward my own ideas through the medium of the printed page as found in editorials in the "International Journal" and other documents and also thereby secure for the Journal his generous consideration.

We started off well by saying at the same time how we had long heard of each other's great reputation. I also thanked him for certain silver ornaments which he had given me on my 60th birthday on November 29th, of the memorable year (at least memorable for me in a diplomatic sense) 1917. He then passed the compliment to me by the following words:

"You have lived in China many years and know all about the conditions in China, what do you think of the present situation and what are your lofty ideas as to what ought to be done?"

I replied: "The longer I live in China the less do I understand China. Many years ago I was ready to give my advice, but now I have no great theories, only good wishes for China and many hopes. I must seek instruction at your hands."

The Marshal praised my rare modesty, and so we were getting nearer and nearer to real important questions. I first ventured to ask if he had received word of the Parliament meeting the day before. He nodded his head that he had not. And here I was duly impressed with Chinese stolidity of character in the face of stirring events.

I then advanced to the following question: "The situation in China depends very much on whether a President is elected or not. Do you think the election for President can be carried through, and if so, when?"

"Whether the election for President is carried through or not rests according to law entirely with the two Houses of Parliament. If within the time limit Parliament fails according to law to elect a President, the Republic will be left without a President and without a Government, and the culpability for the failure will be placed at the door of the representatives of the people. If Parliament neglects its duty, some way must be found within the law and suited to the needs to still effect a Government and maintain relations with other Governments."

"Your honorable country for twelve years has had one uprising after another and the outlook is bad for the future; what kind of a method ought to be employed for bringing about the unification, peace and happiness of the whole country?"

"Our unworthy country all through its long history has had great upheavals and revolutions, but always succeeded by years of peace and safety. The transfer from a monarchy to republic was sudden and widespread, thought was given to overthrow of past traditions rather than to the act of building up a government of the people. The main thought in a republic such as China professed to have should all along have worked for the interests of the people as a whole and not to place power in the hands of a few factional leaders. What is needed under any form of government, and especially in a republic, is for those who are leaders to hold affection for the people and place first in their minds plans for saving the country. If these men can only follow the dictate of conscience, the re-unification of the country will be soon accomplished."

Marshal Tsao elaborated this point at considerable length, tracing the current of events from one dynasty to another, and then through the twelve years of the Republic. His main thought is as expressed above.

I ventured to touch on the difficulties of being a President just at present, greater even than when Yuan Shih-kai became President the first year of the republic after the overthrow of the Manchu Dynasty; and I stated that as the Marshal himself would probably be the chosen President, he would be the one to face these difficulties. I broached this idea with "fear and trembling," but Marshal Tsao showed no offence and expressed his own ideas of the matter.

"To be a President just now is to be in no happy position, I for one do not seek the difficulties that stand in the way, but if by legal processes I should be chosen to assume this high office I will do what duty calls me to do and not shrink away because difficulties have to be met. The problems of government can be solved, not by the President alone, whoever he may be, but by all working together."

"According to my humble opinion," I added, "the financial problem is one of the most difficult of all; how can it be solved? Is not this task a difficult one?"

Answer: "Our mean country has always been an agricultural country. The territory is large, the products are many, hidden wealth waits to be brought into use, and vast areas, now uncultivated, can be set apart for millions of our people to find a livelihood. As soon as unification is effected, the soldiers will disband of themselves and can be directed into all manner of useful employments. Revenue that belongs to the Central Government will not be retained in the provinces and will be sufficient for all our governmental uses. What appears to be a difficulty will be none at all. The real difficulty as in every government is to get the right men and follow the right principles. As to our Chinese people, they are frugal, patient and hard-toiling. They form a great force to carry out wise plans for improving farming and gardening, for conservation and forestry, and for colonising distant areas which are now neglected. Experts can be invited to help, loans no doubt can be secured, and this whole wide country of ours will be busy at work. Within ten years we will be as well off as a short time ago, and within thirty years China will be among the most prosperous and contented in all the world."

It was good to see such optimism in these days when foreigners are apt to paint things in black colors, and many Chinese stand in dread of threatened catastrophe from Heaven or renewed strife in north and south. May Marshal Tsao continue to think these happy thoughts.—Far Eastern Times.

Napoleon And The Cave Dwellers

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

With the yearly accumulating discoveries of the remains and achievements of prehistoric man the evidence is strengthened that, even when he had not better homes than natural caverns, he was fundamentally, not only in body but in mind, what he is to-day. Some persons seem to be surprised by this. They think, apparently, that there could not have been much intelligence when there was no gunpowder.

The fact is, however, that all the triumphs of civilization which make us so proud to-day have very long roots, running down into an enormously deep soil. They are only a temporary surface efflorescence and not an evidence of any essentially new powers bestowed upon man. He has cultivated his natural powers to a high degree in a special direction—that is all. Can we even be certain that the direction taken is the best possible

There is to be found in a place where surely nobody would ever have thought of looking for such a thing a very interesting statement concerning the conditions of life in the primitive age of mankind. This is among the manuscripts written by Napoleon Bonaparte, when he was a very young man and when he had not yet caught sight of the "star of destiny" that was to lead him up to his solitary peak of human fame.

His brooding genius had induced him to ponder upon Rousseau's famous doctrine's concerning man's earliest social state, and after annotating Rousseau's discourse with repeated expressions of dissent, such as: "Je ne crois pas cela" (I don't believe that), the young Napoleon sets down his own "reflections on the state of nature," as follows:

"I think that man never was a wandering, isolated being, without connections, without need of his fellows. On the contrary, I believe that, once emerged from infancy and arrived at the age of adolescence, the individual man felt the necessity of companionship, that he united himself with a woman, picked out some cavern, which lay at the center of his daily excursions, to be his refuge in tempests and at night, and his storehouse for provisions. This union was strengthened by habit and by the bond of children: nevertheless, it might be broken through caprice.

"I think that in the course of their excursions two savages who had once met accidentally met again, and on recognising one another became friendly. They felt a desire to bring their dwelling-places nearer together. They did bring them nearer, and in that instant the natural peuplade (group forming a primitive community) was born. I believe that this peuplade lived happily because it had a shelter against the seasons, an abundance of nourishment, and good results, and because it possessed the sentiment of natural religion.

"I believe that during many centuries the earth was thus shared among scattered peuplades which were widely separated, hostile and small in numbers. Later, as they multiplied, they must have established relations among one another. From that time the earth could supply their needs without cultivation, and property and social relations came into existence, and shortly governments.

"Exchanges began, and thence riches, tastes. Then the imagination emerged from the cave where it had so long been shut up. L'amour propre (self-love) impetuous prepossession, prejudices, pride, and then the pale ambitious were there who seized control of affairs, and young scamps who kissed the women and chased the girls.

"My point in not to demonstrate that this was the series of steps by which men came to the social state, but only to prove that they never could have lived as wanderers, without domicile, without connections without other wants than furtive, opportune relations between the sexes.

"Why do we assume that man ate when in the state of nature? Because no example exists of man living by any other means than eating. I believe that in the state of nature man had the same faculties of feeling and reasoning (as now). He must have used them, for there is no example of men ever having existed without the use of these two faculties. . . . Man must have known pity, friendship and love, from then gratitude, veneration, respect. If it were true that sentiment and reason are not inherent in man, but only the fruits of society, then there would be no natural sentiment and reason, no duty owed to virtue, no happiness for virtue."

Thus in his youth dreamed the man of Marengo, Austerlitz, Waterloo and St. Helena!

A Treasure-Trove of Humor From His Newly Discovered Newspaper Writings

GETTING AT THE FACTS

It was late in the afternoon and the day staff was absent. The night editor had just come in, pulled off his coat, vest, collar and necktie, rolled up his shirt sleeves and eased down his suspenders, and was getting ready for work.

Someone knocked timidly outside the door, and the night editor yelled; "Come in."

A handsome young lady with entreating blue eyes and a Psyche knot entered with a rolled manuscript in her hand.

The night editor took it silently and unrolled it. It was a poem and he read it half aloud with a convulsive jaw movement that resulted from his organs of speech partially engaged with about a quarter of a plug of chewing tobacco. The poem ran thus:

A REQUIEM

The soft sweet, solemn dawn stole through
The latticed room's deep gloom;
He lay in pallid, pulseless peace,
Fulfilled his final doom.

Oh!, breaking heart of mine—Oh, break!
Left lonely here to mourn;
My alter Ego, mentor, friend,
Thus from me rudely torn,

Within his chamber dead he lies,
And stilled is his sweet lyre:
How long he pored o'er midnight
oil,
With grand poetic fire.

Till came the crash, when his bright light
Went out, and all was drear;
And my soul was left to wait
In Grief and anguish here.

"When did this happen? asked the night editor.

"I wrote it last night, sir," said the young lady. "Is is good enough to print?"

"Last night," H'm. A little stale, but the other papers didn't get it. Now, miss," continued the night editor smiling and throwing out his chest, "I'm going to teach you a lesson in the newspaper business. We can use this item, but it's not in proper shape. Just take that chair, and I'll rewrite it for you, showing you how to properly prepare an item of this sort in order to secure its insertion."

He wrote a few lines upon a sheet of paper and then read aloud:

FATAL ACCIDENT

"Last evening Mr. Alter Ego of this city was killed by the explosion of a kerosene lamp while at work in his room.'

"Now, you see, miss, the item includes the main facts in the case, and—"

"Sir!" said the young lady indignantly. "There is nothing of the kind intimated in the poem. The lines are imaginary and are intended to express the sorrow of a poet's friend at his untimely demise."

"Why, miss," said the night editor, "it plainly refers to midnight oil, and a crash, and when the light blew up the gent was left for dead in the room."

"You horrid thing, "said the young lady, "give me my manuscript. I will bring it back when the literary editor is in."

"I'm sorry," said the night editor as he handed her the roll, and it would have made a nice little scoop. Don't happen to know of any accidents in your ward: births, run-aways, holdups, or breach of promise suits, do you?"

But the slamming of the door was the only answer from the fair poetess.

Thirsting For God's House—Tongue Fire

I

"My soul thirsteth for thee . . to see thy power and thy glory, so as I have seen thee in the Sanctuary."—Psalm 63:1. 2.

Not to many of us has it happened to be entirely deprived of the outward ordinances of religion, to dwell in a region where there was no church and no community of worship and no service of Christian praise and prayer.

But perhaps there are some of the readers of this who have known what it is to be kept by sickness or infirmity of body or the duty of caring for others who were helpless for a long time from the house of God and the community of Christian worship.

If the church has ever been a reality and a blessing to you this enforced absence has given you pain and distress.

You may have borne it patiently and without murmuring; but still it has been a real trial, and you have felt that deep thirstiness of spirit which David describes in his psalm.

For when a man can willingly forego even the outward services of religion and stay away from the house of God, and let the seasons of devotion and communion pass by without a regret, his faith and love must be at a low ebb, if, indeed, they have not altogether dried up and blown away.

II.

TONGUE FIRE

"The tongue is a fire."—James 3:6.

We are all warned against the danger of fire in the forest. But the most devastating fires are kindled in life by a reckless, evil tongue.

There are two good rules which ought to be written upon every heart.

Never believe anything bad about anybody unless you positively know that it is true.

Never tell even that, unless you feel that it is absolutely necessary, and that God is listening while you tell it.

If you will follow these rules you may lie down in peace, and God will take care of you if you keep your lips from evil and your heart from guile.

If every careless and half-malicious gossip could see the harm that has been wrought by his idle words, repeating unproved rumors, he would be horrified at the account he must render for setting and spreading tongue-fire.

LIFE AS IT IS

BY THOMAS L. MASSON

IT CERTAINLY IS FUNNY

You cannot help other people always by talking to them. You must demonstrate. For instance, there is a story of a darkey in a movie show who balked at getting into bed with a lion, in a certain picture.

"But Sam," said the manager persuasively, "he's a perfectly good lion, quiet and docile and would not hurt you. That lion has been brought up on a milk diet."

"Dat's all right about dat milk diet," replied Sam. "I was brung up on a milk diet, but I'se eatin' meat now."

When I was 9 years old there was a colored woman who worked for our family who couldn't read or write. Her name was Lucinda. She was married and had children who went to school. But she had been a slave and had never been taught.

One day my mother said to me: "Why don't you teach Lucinda instead of telling her stories she might read herself?" I thought this would be fun, and so every day for half an hour I taught her her letters. She learned rapidly and in about six months she was able to read and write very well.

As long as she lived, Lucinda was so grateful to me that it was positively painful. The funny part of all this was that it was an idea I hadn't thought of myself but which someone else (my mother) had suggested, and yet it made me glad afterward that this woman had been able to maintain her mental freedom through me—indeed, it made me so glad that it had a tremendous effect upon my whole life. It gave me in a practical way the great idea that if we can actually be of means of helping other people we are helping ourselves very much more.

Later, when I became an editor the greatest pleasure I got was to bring new people into the literary game—teaching them to read and write, something that even literary people don't always know. (I don't think I know much about it myself!) And when they made good, as they frequently did, it made me feel better than if I had done it myself.

This may sound conceited, but I don't mean it that way. I am very conceited, but it is about my failures. A real first-class failure is a grand thing to happen to anybody.

Then there was another thing that this incident taught me, which is that the best things come to us unbidden. When we try to force ourselves, we usually get left at the post. When we obey suggestions, we are often carrying out orders which lift us into unknown possibilities.

CASTORIA
for Infants and Children.

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the cells, which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying power, are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable.

The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them without with narcotics. Castoria contains no narcotics if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher guarantees genuine Castoria

Physicians Recommend Castoria.

"Your preparation known as Castoria I have used for years in children's complaints and I have found nothing better."
JOHN J. LEFFA, M. D., Cleveland, Ohio.

"I have prescribed your Castoria in many cases and have always found it an effective and speedy remedy."
A. F. PEREIRA, M. D., St. Louis, Mo.

"For several years I recommended your 'Castoria' and shall always continue to do so, as it has invariably produced beneficial results."
EDWIN F. PARDEE, M. D., New York City.

"I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild, laxative effect and freedom from harm."
EDWARD PARDEE, M. D., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Your Castoria is a meritorious household remedy. It is purely vegetable and acts as a mild cathartic. Above all, it does no harm, which is more than can be said of the great majority of children's remedies."
VICTOR H. COFFMAN, M. D., Omaha, Neb.

"Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a safe and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments."
J. A. PARKER, M. D., Kansas City, Mo.

Prophecy Of Doom Raised Food Costs In Yangchow City

(China Press Correspondence)

Yangchow, Oct. 1—The five days of expected darkness passed over this city with no other result than the rise in price of certain articles of food, such as dates, parched rice, and other sorts that need no cooking, which rose to high prices. Now the credulous are divided between relief and disgust.

The new mayor who recently assumed duties here has already begun to show himself a competent official. Many well-entrenched evils are being dealt with, and many persons are mending their ways. There is no doubt that wherever the officials show a disposition to enforce law and order, they find it easy to do so.

This city is following the lead of Shanghai in the matter of the organisation of Street Unions. The matter is being taken up with interest.

Good crops are reported from the country around here, and the price of rice has been lowered. When rice is cheap, peace prevails.

Peking, Sept. 29.—The greatest archaeological find ever made in China has just been unearthed in a mound marking the grave of a member of the royal family of the old feudal state of Cheng, within the walls of Hsincheng Hsien, Honan. The contents are thus described by Mr. Carl W. Bishop and Mr. Wenley of the Freer Gallery of the Smithsonian Institution of Washington, who went down to view the work at the request of General Wu Pei-fu, whose soldiers are doing the excavating. Most of the specimens have been removed and are now at Chengchow.

This mound was discovered by a man digging a well and there has been taken out close to one hundred pieces of bronze, some of which is covered with gold and inlaid with precious stones. Because of the lack of knowledge of those unearthing the find, much of it has been broken. As it stands, aside from its untold value to science, the collection is estimated by Mr. Bishop to be worth a half million dollars merely as fine old bronze.

SKELETON OWNER FOUND

The skeleton of the dead man was found in good preservation since the vermillion used in olden times for preserving the body had gone through and impregnated the bones. It is thought that he was interred sometime between 1,000 and 5,000 B. C. There was no coffin but traces of a rush mat under and above the body were found, also impregnated with vermillion.

The bronzes of this early Chow dynasty which have been found include a war chariot with three sets of chains, four large bells, one weighing three thousand ounces and seventeen small bells, about one foot high, a wine pot with inscriptions on it stating that it was given to the royal family, two large vases, three and half feet high embellished with convention scrolls, and bulls and rams heads projections and several bronze tripods for large pots.

PEARLS AND JADE

Mr. Bishop stated that they also dug up mother of pearl beads and fragments of jade coronets such as an important person would have worn on his head in those days. Mr. Bishop also secured a small jade tiger, finely carved and measuring about two inches in length.

There are several other mounds in this district, which Mr. Bishop thinks was the burying place of this royal family. The mound which has just been excavated was about twenty feet deep with several passages leading to the center where the body lay with the bronzes placed around it.

MORE MOUNDS WAITING

General Wu Pei-fu who immediately took over the work when it was reported that the find had been made by a man who was digging a well, extended the courtesy of permitting Mr. Bishop and Mr. Wenley to study the find and to make a plan table drawing of the mound. He has asked their co-operation in opening the other mounds so the destruction by soldiers ignorantly digging in the present one may be avoided and the specimens brought out whole. The bronzes are awaiting their fate as to whether they will be sent to Peking or put in the Museum in Kaifeng.
